

'A stride or a shuffle' from The Guardian (5 December 1985)

Caption: On 5 December 1985, commenting on the outcome of the Luxembourg European Council of 2 and 3 December, British daily newspaper The Guardian considers that the meeting of Heads of State or Government of the Ten can be qualified as 'historic' if they manage to achieve an institutional reform of the European Communities and to employ majority voting in the Council to facilitate the establishment of a single internal market by 1992.
