The first European Conference of Local Authorities was held in 1957.

On 19 February 1975, the Committee of Ministers amended the charter of the Conference to extend its consultative powers to representatives of regional authorities. It was renamed the Conference of Local and Regional Authorities of Europe before changing its name again in 1979, when it became the Standing Conference of Local and Regional Authorities of Europe. In 1994, following on from the summit, a statutory text established the Congress of Local and Regional Authorities of Europe (CLRAE), with two chambers.
