- developing ePublications for the education community (teaching modules);
- publishing articles in scientific journals;
- preparing calls for proposals and implementing projects supported by national and international funding in the field of research and education/lifelong learning;
- reaching out to and working with target communities, particularly within specialist European studies networks and using digital tools.

You will work as part of a team, employing an interdisciplinary approach that links European studies with information and communication technologies. You will contribute to the development of the centre’s national and international cooperation network.

Your skills:
- PhD in European Union law, preferably with at least 5 years’ post-PhD experience.
- Extensive knowledge of European regional organisations and their history, development and current environment.
- Experience in using ICT and Web-based methods and tools.
- Experience in project management.
- Experience in collaborative projects with national or European funding.
- A perfect command of French and English. Knowledge of other languages including German would be an advantage.
- Good working knowledge of standard office and IT tools and social networks.

Your professional and personal qualities:
- You have a strong sense of team spirit, excellent organisational skills and a proactive approach.
- You value quality and have an eye for detail and good analytical and reasoning skills.
- You are able to keep deadlines and you demonstrate a methodical, thorough, pragmatic and efficient approach.

Deadline for applications: 30 June 2015.

Planned start date: 15 September 2015.

Please send your application (CV, covering letter and relevant academic publications), with the reference 03/24_02, by email to: jobs@cvce.eu.
